Studying abroad in London for a semester was an amazing adventure. As an English major abroad, I was able to engage with outstanding literature while exploring a new culture. Reading Virginia Woolf's classic novel Mrs. Dalloway, while walking the busy streets that Woolf mentions, was amazing. Woolf's stories have come to life through these landscapes. In my course on William Blake, I read many of his prophetic poems and then our class went to see his illuminated texts up close at the British Museum. The semester abroad was a valuable and positive experience, and I look forward to finishing my English major at Lehigh.
